SIDING STYLE GUIDE

Alside®

WHAT IS HOME TO YOU?

CREATING CUSTOM STYLE

From basic design to ambitious detail, the ideal home often starts with a personal inspiration. A rich color that draws your eye, or a new twist to an established style. It's an infusion of craftsmanship and artistry, distinctive in personality from the angles of the rooftop to the color of the front door. Most of all, the ideal home is a familiar and welcoming space, a mix of quality and culture . . . uniquely revealed in the spirit of you. ■

YOUR HOME, YOUR STYLE

Beautiful and livable – and very much you. where does your concept of "home" start and where do you want it to go? alside vinyl siding has smart solutions for every exterior design approach. a great way to spark the creative process is to take a fresh "first look" at your home's architectural style and space. ■

MODERN/CONTEMPORARY

Clean and cool is the visual delight of this home category. It can range from sublime to powerful, depending on the architecture and color palette. Bold contrasts can amp up the energy for a lively, chic vibe, while elegant tone-on-tone designs channel tranquility and sophistication. Modern and contemporary homes are conservative in adornment yet striking in their sleek, artistic appeal. ■

TRADITIONAL/HISTORIC

This "apple pie" of home styles is unbeatable in popularity, in part because of its far-reaching family that includes everything from colonial homes and Tudor mansions to quaint country farmhouses. The common thread is refined lines and graceful curves paired with detailed accents and tasteful colors, all perfectly executed with just the right touch of grandeur. Old mixed with new is forever moving forward and reinvigorating the love of classic homes. ■

BIG SPACE/SMALL SPACE

Regardless of the square footage, the potential for wow-factor is equally within reach. Smart color choices can have a big effect when working with smaller spaces. An exterior color palette of all similar hues will make a small home appear larger. Simply using a bold hue on the front door easily infuses visual drama to the cohesive color scheme. For larger spaces, variations in color combinations abound. Whether you prefer a monochromatic palette, complementing hues or contrasting shades, you'll want to think about the architectural details that command attention, such as a front porch, dormers or decorative shutters. Keep in mind that roof shingles, stone masonry or brick accents also will contribute to the overall finished look. ■

URBAN/SUBURBAN

Inner city and mixed-use communities are flush with creativity in home exterior designs, ushering in innovative materials and inspired color combinations. With homes ranging from refined upscale to relaxed bohemian, the urban "signature look" is all about expressing personality and individual style. Suburban homes, on the other hand, often favor established, local styles and color trends. Individual looks emerge yet also tend to harmonize with surrounding homes and aesthetics. ■

The secret is out. America chooses vinyl siding more than any other exterior cladding. In the world of handcrafted beauty mixed with modern technology, vinyl siding wins popular favor with it luxurious appearance, superior durability, easy upkeep and excellent value. It's also friendlier to the environment than many other siding products, making it a great choice today and for generations to come. ■
BEAUTY

You'll find no restraint or limitations here. The scope of profile styles, colors and textures is broad and exciting. From classic hues, to architectural reds and blues, to variegated colors that recreate natural cedar beauty, the palette thrives with inspiration for an exquisite home design. Soffit, fascia, trim, decorative accents – including shakes, scallops and more – round out the versatility of this vast and growing product line.

DURABILITY

The most beautiful siding invention is durability. Homeowners want a quality home exterior, and want it to last. Today's vinyl siding is performance-engineered to protect your home from high winds, pounding rain, intense heat and frigid cold. And thanks to state-of-the-art technology, darker siding colors are now specially formulated to resist fading and weathering, ensuring the deep, luxurious appearance stays beautiful and true.

LOW-MAINTENANCE

If you like the idea of having more free time and less home maintenance, you will love vinyl siding. It recreates the beauty of freshly painted wood siding, but without the worries of rotting, splitting or insect damage. The rich vinyl color runs throughout the panel, so it won't chip, flake or peel like painted wood – and it never needs to be painted. An occasional rinse with a garden hose will remove most airborne dust and dirt to restore the like-new beauty.

GREEN BENEFITS

The word "futuristic" might not come to mind when you think of vinyl siding, but it should. As a sustainable and recyclable product, vinyl siding is a positive choice for protecting the planet today and for future generations. Vinyl siding helps conserve cedar and other wood often used for building materials and is rated better than brick and fiber cement for overall environmental impact, according to Building for Environmental and Economic Sustainability (BEES) studies.[1] It never needs to be painted and can be cleaned with mild soap and water, which helps ensure that it does not release harmful solvents into the environment. Vinyl siding also has a modest energy use in manufacturing and reduced transportation impact due to its lighter weight, which contributes significantly less to global warming than many other siding products.[1]

VALUE

For nearly two decades vinyl siding has been a leading choice for exterior cladding on new single-family homes. This broad appeal stems not only from its beauty, durability, and easy upkeep, but also from the fact that vinyl siding adds value to homes. In today's resale market, an attractive, low-maintenance home exterior can help enhance the value of your home. On average, homeowners who remodel with vinyl siding can expect to recover approximately 73% of the cost of installation when it's time to sell.[2] Vinyl siding also has a low total-installed cost – lower than all other exterior cladding because vinyl siding goes up faster and does not require painting.[3] ▪
